In the introduction to this most injudicious me-"belle rebelle," as an enthusiastic admirer calls ber, as a victim of Yanker tyranny, as "B warmbrarted, impulsive, heroic woman of the South, who, maddened by the wrongs and cruelties inflicted upon her pannle, and exulted by the love she born them shove the common cares and considerations of life, dashed into the field braving more than a woman's part in her country's struggle for liberty." Now in answer to this glowing enlogy, we purpose to show from the "rebel sov's" own statement what were the note she and her bushand are brand of having committed, and what are the punishments she profeste against their having suffered for their heroism. Our bernine, if we may so call her, commended ! espairive, refined girl, by shooting a Federal soldier who had offended her mother. We give the anecdote in her own words. "The Tankets had brought with them a large Pederal flag, which they were now preparing to holst: over our goof in token of our submission to their authority; but to this my mother would not consent. Stepping forward with a firm step. she quietly but resolutely. Men every member of my household will die hefore that Bag shall be raised over us' Upon this one of the soldiers, thrusting bimself forward addressed my mother and myself in language as offensive as it is possible to conceive. I could stand it no longer: my indignation was roused beyond control ; mr. blood was literally boiling in my veins; I drow out my pistol and shot him. He was carried away mortally wounded, and som after expired."

As the lade has not thought fit to explain, whether her mother was in any real danger, we cannot say what amount of justisfication there may have been for the not : we are obliged to content purselves with ther declaration that " the blood I then shed has left no stain on my mind, imposed no burden on my conscience." In roturn for this deed the Faderal commander at Martinsburgh, where Miss Boyd's family resided, actually sent a guard to protect the family from any further annoyance. The lady for whose officer was to devote his sword to the South as sake this consideration was shown made acquaintthe price of obtaining the band of the "bell ance with the Northern officers sent to protect her, an acquaintance which the rebel spy did not fail to turn to account on more than this one occasion." Lufact, if her own necount is to be gradited, the protematically obtained intelligence ! of the Federal movements by her acquaintance profession as a spy we may judge by the following story, which she reintes herself :- On our oceasion. when she was out riding, her horse ran away and carried ber into the lines of the Federal army then encamped before Manassas. The officers in command of the picker where her stred was stopped not only relieved her apprehensions at once by telling her "they were exceedingly proud of their beauof courtesy the American Joan of Are gave up loage. Of course the prison life was wretched her escort as prinoners as soon as she had got them within the Confederate lines, and appears to think

Bella Boyd is so innocurate in her statement on matters of fact, and uses language of such an exaggerated character on every nessible occasion. that we entertain considerable sloubts as to who ther she really did half the mischief she represents herself to have done. However, if her story is true, she was a most vigilant, daring, and soncessful any, and by her aystem of espionance caused the Yankees the loss of many battles and try, they will find course for gratitude that their the lives of many bundreds, if not thousands, of lives were placed in the hands of the poonle they soldiers. In corroboration of her services she malign and abuse. Had they committed similar quotes a letter from " Stonewall" Jackson, which nots under any of our Old-World Hovernments,

"May 23, 1862. "Mrss Belle Born, I thank you, for myself adventages. The Spectator. and for the army, for the immense service that you have rendered your country to-day. - Hustily, I am your Friend, T. J. JASESON, C. S. A." The "immense service consisted in conveying intelligence of the tastics of the Federals to the GOVERNMENT, LEGAL AND General on the eve of battle. Now we are quite awaye that war cannot be carried on without spics. But yet the world has hitberto declined to consider the trade of a spy a dignified or honorable one. Miss Boyd would probably report that her services as a ppy were rendered not for lucre, but for live of her native State, We are quite willing to admit the ples, but then the patriot spy should be ready to accept the responsibility of his acts. As it is, this lady heroing boasts on one page of how she brought defeat and death on her country's invaders, and then whimpers in the next because these invaders dated to suspect an "innocent William Action has been commenced in young girl." It is worth while examining what the real persecutions were to which this arch Dhuramsey Conjubboy against the above named enemy of the Union was submitted by the Yankesa. By ber own acknowledgment she was a spy, and to recover the num of Twelve thousand Eight hantherefore liable to the punishment of death, in ac- drest and Twelve Dollars and Fifty Cents for dacordance with the Articles of War. She forthwith resumed interest for the fortenance at interest by the her occupation as a purveyor of secret intelligence from the Federals to the Confederates, and rendered, as she believes, most important services to that the said Byramico Hormurjee Cuma does mit har cause. On her return to Martinsburgh she was advised by the Federal Between authorities not to remain there as she would be on danger of herest. She disregarded the kindly warning, and was arrested accordingly, and placed in the Carroll Prison. The only particular hardship of which she complains is that of the same prison.
